ELOQUENT TRIBUTE.

Obituary on Death of Mrs. Henry Godwin.

The following obituary has been contributed on the death of Mrs. Henry Godwin by a friend of the deceased:

"The announcement on Monday morning in the dailies of the death of Mrs. Henry Godwin came as a severe blow to a host of friends. Not to those in this state alone where she had spent her oblighed and where she had spent her childhood and womanhood, but in many eastern and western cities the news was received by many sorrowing friends.

"The childhood of Helen Ireland Godwin was spent in the old Ireland home on Brigham street, where for many years the family resided.

years the family resided.

"Possessed of a sweet and amiable disposition, she endeared herself in those childhood days to many of the friends who though scattered from the childhoon haunts, today with loving remembrance think of her. For those who watched the development of the child to girlhood and womanhood the subsequent changes were noted with interest. Ever ready to help noted with interest. Ever ready to help those less fortunate than herself, and with the sweet gentleness of intuitive re-finement, she was beloved by all, and fortunate were those who could call her 'friend.'

"The grim reaper came unexpectedly, and although Mrs. Godwin was not in robust health, nothing serious was anticipated. The end came on Saturday even ing with all those near and dear of family ties about her.

To the serrowing mother, husband and brother the heartfeit sympathy of many friends goes out, and may the God of love in his mercy remember and comfort those who are left, and may that sorrow which now fills their hearts be soothed and lightened, so that

"The cares that infest the day,
May like Arabs, fold their tents,
And silently steal away."

A FRIEND.
